

Essentials of Hindutva by Savarkar

I used ChatGPT to analyze it chapter by chapter so that nothing was left unread.

There are two central philosophical ideas behind Hindutva:

1. Humans can't be separated from their origin, place of birth, religion, and language. A person is always influenced by them. You can't remove culture from a person by any form of religious conversion due to language. You can't just wipe out your mother tongue/primary language from your mind.
2. Cultures are heavily influenced by religion, and culture makes all the important decisions. If the central pilgrimage of a given religion isn't geographically situated in the country, it will pose a real risk to the political stability of the state. That's why he was unsure about the loyalty of Muslims and Christians (excluding those who were converted from Hinduism) towards Hindutva.

First point is well established in scientific literature however for second point we need to consider:

In a low literacy rate country, we need religion to operate the empire, which makes people more loyal to religion than any hypothetical secular state we create.

The questions we need to ask:

Q. Will culture/language always remain constant, or will it evolve with time?

If no, then why not ?

If yes, then why and how ? (Anthropology is the name of the subject)
